

This is an Excerpt from a typical Mini-Reading:

Your chart shows that now is a good time to reevaluate and restructure your life from the ground up. The main thing is to make sure that any situation you overhaul meets both personal and practical needs. In other words, make sure that it's something you really want to stay with for quite a while and that it also is something that is based on reality, something you can count on when you need it.

The reason that it needs to be something you'd want to stay with for a while is that Saturn is traveling through your 1st house and this means that things you set in motion will likely be around for quite some time. Saturn rules longevity and commitment. And it doesn't like to see energy spent on things that don't meet the tests of time and reality.

The timeframe for this kind of pursuit is this year and next. So it would be a good idea to at least get started on this path. That way you can get into it enough to find out if you'd really like it. When Saturn travels through a person's 1st house in their chart, people usually set down a foundation, in at least one part of their lives, that isn't going to change for a long time.

It's been thirty years since Saturn was in this part of your chart. So look back to thirty years ago from today. Look at what was going on, your feelings and reactions, the outcomes of situations, and what you learned from those experiences.

There may be some dreams you had when you were a teenager that got put on the back burner or even forgotten about. Or maybe someone discouraged you from going forward with something you were considering. On the other hand, maybe you were the person who told yourself that it wouldn't work.

If nursing pops up from those 30-years ago memories, don't be surprised. Whatever the details, something from thirty years ago is returning for another look-see. Reconsider anything that you may have put on the shelf for later at any time in your life, whether it was thirty years ago or not. Saturn is about our history and when it resurfaces in the 1st house, it's time for a serious life review.

(cont'd...)